B BRIDGES

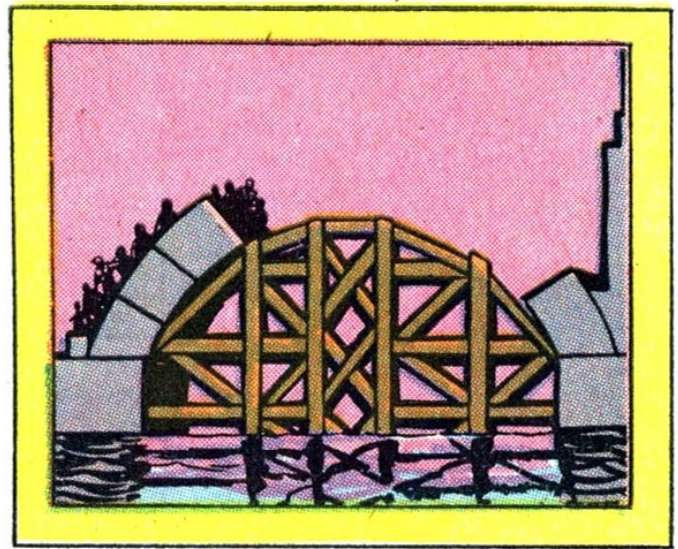

© 1967 BY WESTERN PUBLISHING COMPANY, INC.

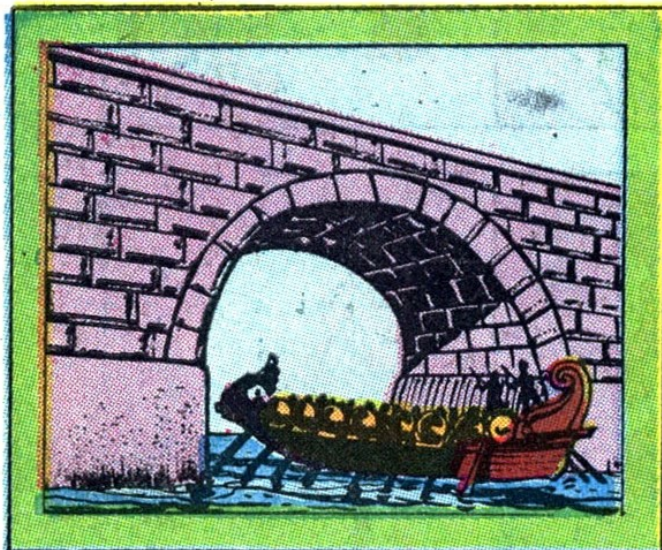

History's first great bridge engineers were the Romans. Their wonderful massive stone archways are found throughout Europe.

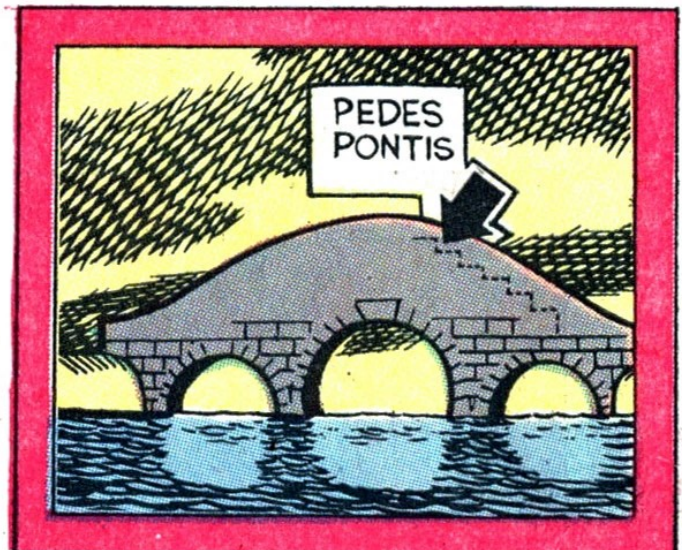

The Romans built these bridge piers in a prow-shape to reduce the undercutting effect of a swift current on the masonry.

When these piers were completed, a timber "falsework" was then erected to support the wedge-shaped stones of the arch.

The stones of the arch were set in overlapping rows for maximum strength. They were held together by their shape alone.

When a longer span was required, the Romans built a larger central arch. Steps (Pe-des pontis) were provided for pedestrians.

Can that meek, mild little man behind all those beakers and test tubes in the police lab really be Captain Nice? If you don't believe it, just watch what happens when he drinks that steaming potion!
